

Fred N. Lerner, D.C., Ph.D

BOARD CERTIFIED IN
CHIROPRACTIC ORTHOPEDICS

 120 S. Spalding Drive, #400, Beverly Hills, CA 90212

Dr. Lerner is a chiropractic orthopedist who has been in private practice since 1980.

Dr. Lerner graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1976 from the University of Toronto. In 1979, he graduated Summa Cum Laude from Los Angeles College of Chiropractic, now part of Southern California University of Health Sciences. Along the way, he has put together and run several different multidisciplinary medical groups. These groups have included orthopedic and neurosurgeons, physiatrists, physical therapists, and acupuncturists, all of whom worked together in a team approach to help their patients.

In 1998, Dr. Lerner became the first chiropractor to receive staff credentials at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center and remained on staff until 2014. He has also served as a consultant to several insurance and health-related companies, as well as professional sports teams.

Dr. Lerner has dedicated a part of his life to public service. Throughout the early and mid-1990s, he worked with several State government groups to reform the Workers Compensation system in California. For about eight years, he served on the SCUHS Alumni Association, the last four as its President. In March of 2007, Dr. Lerner was appointed by Governor Schwarzenegger to serve on the California Board of Chiropractic Examiners. In January of 2008, he was elected as Chairman of the Board and served in that capacity for four consecutive years.

Chiropractic orthopedists treat neuromusculoskeletal problems without using drugs or surgery. With vast experience in his field, Dr. Lerner has specialized knowledge of the muscles, bones, cartilage, joints, tendons, ligaments, other connective tissue, and nerve structures. He continues to work towards developing complementary medicine with-in and without the hospital setting as part of a team approach towards patient care.
